Prineville Reservoir Wildlife Area

Prineville Reservoir Wildlife Area (PRWA) came under the shared management of the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife & United States Bureau of Reclamation in 1962. PRWA is managed for the protection and enhancement of wildlife habitat, big game winter range, improving riparian wetlands, and to promote wildlife stewardship.

Goals of the PRWA include creating recreational opportunities for viewing and enjoying wildlife, including mule deer, bald eagles, and a variety of waterfowl. Boating, hiking, and camping are a few popular activities permitted in the wildlife management area. Hunting and fishing opportunities are also available within PRWA, as regulated by ODFW.

Motorized access is regulated throughout the year to protect wildlife and sensitive habitats. Emergency closures occasionally occur to protect specific areas or sites. Those roads shown in green are open seasonally for motorized access as specified on the map. All motorized vehicle travel on trails, alternative routes, and cross-country is prohibited. PRWA is patrolled regularly by law officials and regulations are strictly enforced.

Non-motorized access by other means is permitted year-round.
