Attachments: 2019 Marten Public Comments from Petitioners.pdf

Dear Chair Finley, Commissioners, and Director Melcher:

Attached please find comments from the Center for Biological Diversity, Cascadia Wildlands, Oregon Wild, the Klamath-Siskiyou Wildlands Center, Defenders of Wildlife, and the Environmental Protection Information Center on the proposed amendment to OAR 635-050-0110 to restrict trapping of Humboldt martens in portions of Western Oregon.

In sum, the draft administrative rules do not adequately protect the Humboldt marten as the rules would only partially protect one of the two known marten populations. We urge the Commission to amend the staff recommendation to fully address the gap in species protections and to properly advance the ultimate vote of the Commission in August 2018.

Because fewer than 200 Humboldt martens survive in Oregon and the subspecies is at risk of extirpation, we are asking the Commission to enact a ban on all marten trapping west of the I-5 corridor, to ban all commercial and recreational mammal trapping in the Oregon Dunes National Recreation Area, and to ban marten traps and other traps set in trees in the Siskiyou and Siuslaw national forests to prevent incidental capture within the range of the Humboldt marten. These steps would comply with the federal Endangered Species Act and would contribute to the recovery of the Humboldt marten in Oregon.

Please contact us if we can provide additional information.

September 10, 2019

Dear Chair Finley, Commissioners, and Director Melcher:

Please accept these comments from the Center for Biological Diversity, Cascadia Wildlands, Oregon Wild, the Klamath-Siskiyou Wildlands Center, Defenders of Wildlife, and the Environmental Protection Information Center ("Petitioners") on the proposed amendment to OAR 635-050-0110 to restrict trapping of Humboldt martens ("marten/s") in portions of Western Oregon.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The draft administrative rules do not adequately protect the Humboldt marten as the rules would only partially protect one of the two known marten populations from trapping, placing the other population at unneeded risk. Both populations are critical to the continued persistence of the marten. We urge the Commission to amend the staff recommendation to fully address the gap in species protections and to properly advance the ultimate vote of the Commission in August 2018.

In Oregon, Humboldt marten populations are found only in a narrow strip of dense shrub habitat in the Oregon Dunes National Recreation Area between the shoreline and Highway 101, and in another population just north of the California border in the Siskiyou National Forest. Fewer than 200 total Humboldt martens survive in Oregon, making the survival of each individual important.

The staff recommendation is that marten harvest be prohibited only in the Oregon Dunes National Recreation Area ("ODNRA," "Dunes"). It is arbitrary to ban marten trapping in only one of the two extant Humboldt marten population areas in Oregon. Further, the only rationale provided by the agency for why trapping protections cannot be proffered for the remaining population of martens in the Siskiyou National Forest is that "it would be difficult to compose regulation language that adequately describes these [trapping] sets." For an agency whose mission is to protect fish and wildlife in Oregon, failing to safeguard a species on the verge of extinction is inexcusable.

Moreover, given that the Humboldt marten will become a federally listed species in October 2019 and any rules adopted today that do not prohibit marten trapping within the Humboldt's marten entire range in Oregon will violate the federal Endangered Species Act, the Commission should put a rule in place today that bans all marten trapping west of the Interstate-5 corridor. Mammal trapping should also be curtailed in the ODNRA because continued trapping in the Dunes could jeopardize the survival of the Humboldt marten due to accidental capture in traps set for other mammals in this narrow strip of forested habitat.

BACKGROUND

The Humboldt marten (Martes caurina humboldtensis) is a critically imperiled subspecies of Pacific marten that was once found in coastal forests from Sonoma County, California north to the Columbia River (see Figure 1; Zielinski et al. 2001, Schwartz et al. 2016, CDFW 2018, Slauson et al. 2019). Due to trapping and to logging of mature forests, this mid-size forest carnivore has been lost from 95 percent of its historic range and is now known from only four small populations of fewer than 100 individuals each, two in California and two in Oregon, each of which is reproductively isolated from other populations (USFWS 2018a). Humboldt martens are threatened by population isolation, trapping, wildfires, logging, rodenticide poisoning, and predation.

FEDERAL ENDANGERED SPECIES ACT

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service proposed the Coastal Distinct Population Segment of the Pacific marten for protection as threatened under the federal Endangered Species Act in October of 2018 (83 FR 50574). The final listing is due by October 9, 2019. The federal listing proposal and the federal species status assessment both specifically identify marten trapping in Oregon as a threat to the survival of the species. The status assessment specifically references the petition to ban marten trapping west of the I-5 in Oregon and states:

Such a ban would eliminate the risk of central Oregon coast martens to be legally harvested, either intentionally or incidentally. It would also eliminate the risk of southern Oregon coast martens to be targeted by trappers, but they would still be vulnerable to incidental capture in traps targeting other furbearers. (USFWS 2018b, p. 44.)

When the Humboldt marten becomes federally listed in October, if the final rule remains consistent with the proposed rule, then state authorization of marten trapping will violate Section 9 of the Endangered Species Act which specifically prohibits the trapping of listed species. The listing proposal for the marten states:

The prohibitions of section 9(a)(1) of the Act make it illegal for any person subject to the jurisdiction of the United States to take (which includes harass, harm, pursue, hunt, shoot, wound, kill, trap, capture, or collect; or to attempt any of these) endangered species of fish or wildlife within the United States. To the extent the section 9(a)(1) prohibitions apply only to endangered species, this proposed rule would apply those same prohibitions to the coastal marten. These provisions are necessary because, absent the protections of the Act, the species is likely to become in danger of extinction in the foreseeable future. Applying the prohibitions of the Act will minimize threats that could cause further declines in the status of the species. Additionally, these provisions are advisable because the species needs active conservation to maintain or improve the quality of its habitat, and to sustain and expand the species' population and occupied range. (83 FR 50580.)

TRAPPING PETITION BACKGROUND

In April 2018 conservation groups petitioned the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife to limit marten trapping in portions of Western Oregon to safeguard the Humboldt marten. Specifically, we asked that marten trapping be curtailed west of the Interstate 5 corridor. Because martens are vulnerable to being captured in traps set for other species, we requested a ban on all mammal trapping in the ODNRA and a ban on marten traps and other traps set in trees in the Siskiyou and Siuslaw national forests.

Recent publications identify trapping as a significant threat that could cause the extirpation of the Humboldt marten in Oregon (FWS 2018, Linnell et al. 2018, Moriarty et al. 2016). A peer-reviewed scientific study concluded that “two or more annual human-caused mortalities on martens (e.g. trapping and road-kills) would lead to a substantial risk of extirpation” (Linnell et al. 2018). For a subpopulation of 30 individuals (which approximates estimates for each subpopulation of the Central Coast population), they estimate a 32 percent risk of extirpation from just two annual human-caused mortalities, and a 99 percent risk of extirpation from three annual human-caused mortalities. The Central Coastal population already incurs human-caused mortalities from vehicle strikes, further escalating the risk to the populations’ survival from even a single trapping mortality.

Trapping is an ongoing threat to the marten and relying on the average of 30-years of data to downplay the threat does not incorporate the risk of future trapping. Moreover, the sentence in the agenda item summary stating that no coastal martens have been legally trapped or harvested in Oregon since 2014 is misleading because 3 coastal martens were trapped in both 2014 and in 2013, and 2 were trapped in 2011. The only published population model concludes that this level of mortality is enough to extirpate the small population.

To allow for population recovery, marten trapping should be curtailed throughout the marten’s historical range in coastal Oregon, and trapping for other mammals should be curtailed in extant population areas. The federal species status assessment acknowledges the threat to martens from traps set for other species:

Although we are unaware of marten-specific information, injuries of varying severity have been documented in other mid-sized carnivores captured by restraint traps, including cage or box traps (see lossa et al. 340–341 for summary). We assume martens would also be at risk to injury if caught incidentally in restraint traps, although we cannot predict the frequency or magnitude of injury. Furthermore, martens captured in restraint traps may be subject to capture myopathy (mortality due to the stress caused from being trapped). We are unaware of numbers of incidental capture rates or mortalities due to capture myopathy as a result of legal fur trapping. However, three martens live-trapped by researchers in the Central Coastal Oregon population in 2015–2016 either died in the trap or shortly after removal; cause of death was unconfirmed, but was suspected to be a result of stress-induced shock (OSU 2016, p. 1). (FWS 2018, p. 42.).

CALIFORNIA REGULATIONS

The Humboldt marten was protected as endangered under the California Endangered Species Act in 2018.

California banned the trapping of Humboldt martens in 1946. The California Wildlife Protection Act of 2019 prohibits commercial or recreational trapping on both public and private lands of both fur-bearing and non-game mammals.

Before the 2019 trapping ban, California trapping regulations already banned the use of body-gripping traps for commercial and recreational trapping, including snares and leghold traps designed to restrain the animal as well as traps designed to kill the animal, such as conibear traps (California Code of Regulations Title 14, §3003.1(a)).

INADEQUATE NOTIFICATION TO PETITIONERS

Petitioners did not receive notice or consultation on the proposed rulemaking. We were not included in communications with other stakeholder groups or in discussions of the proposed language whereas trapping interests were clearly involved in these preliminary discussions as reflected in the public comments. The public involvement included sporting groups, state and federal agencies, Oregon Trappers Association, Oregon State Police, and “other interested parties” but did not include the petitioners. Given that our petition precipitated the proposed rule, exclusion of Petitioners reflects flawed process and the potential for biased decision making.

BIAS IN PRESENTATION OF SCIENCE

The presentation of scientific information to the Commission by fur-bearer coordinator Derek Broman appears biased. The agenda item summary prepared by ODFW staff for the proposed marten harvest changes downplays the threat posed to the survival of the Humboldt marten by the state’s continued authorization of trapping within the Humboldt marten’s range. Mr. Broman has repeatedly expressed his personal opinion on the marten’s status rather than relaying to the Commission what the peer-reviewed science actually says. Mr. Broman has gone so far as to publicly insult the published science and does so again in the agenda item summary where he puts forth his opinion that there are “substantial problems” in the published paper from marten researchers that concludes that marten trapping could extirpate the Central Coastal Oregon population. This “critique” is unpublished, entirely unsupported, and disrespectful to the scientists dedicating their careers to this species.

The federal species status assessment also identifies trapping in Oregon as a primary threat factor to the marten’s persistence in Oregon. Mr. Broman submitted comments on the species status assessment and tried to downplay the published paper and the threat of trapping but federal scientists rejected his opinion and did not incorporate his suggestions into the final status assessment. In fact, the final assessment adds language indicating that the estimated risk of extirpation is conservative because it assumes high survival and fecundity and does not consider random events:

The results of the study suggests that even a small amount of human-caused mortalities (road-kills, trapping) will greatly increase the probability of extirpation over the next 30 years. This is despite the researchers' acknowledgement of assuming relatively high survival and fecundity rates and not fully considering environmental stochasticity or potential catastrophic events in their analysis (Linnell et al. 2018, pp. 14–15.) (USFWS 2018, p. 35).

The information presented to the Commission at the September 2018 meeting when the Commission voted to reject a petition from conservation organizations to protect the marten under the Oregon Endangered Species Act was also misleading and did not neutrally present published information on the marten's range, taxonomy, population status, or threats but represented instead Mr. Broman's personal opinions on the marten's range and status rather than published science.

This particular situation underscores the need for ODFW to reexamine how it approaches species conservation efforts and by extension, restructuring internal wildlife divisions so that imperiled species, like the Humboldt marten, aren't managed through the "game" and furbearer programs. We strongly recommend that given the Humboldt marten's status as a threatened species, its management be taken out of the game division.

LISTING STATUS

The Petitioners also petitioned the Commission to add the Humboldt marten to the state list of endangered species pursuant to ORS 496.176 in June of 2018. This petition was rejected because the Commission believed there was not sufficient scientific evidence to distinguish the Humboldt marten from other marten subspecies. The Department materials now recognize that indeed the marten is a unique subspecies. The Commission has the authority to add a species, subspecies, or Distinct Population Segment to the list of endangered species, ORS 496.172, and also has the authority to take emergency action to add a species to the list of endangered species if it determines there is a significant threat to the continued existence of the species within the state. Given that the loss of just a few individuals can lead to extirpation, a pressing emergency does exist to warrant listing. We thus urge the Commission to protect the Humboldt marten under the Oregon Endangered Species Act,

CONCLUSION

Because the Humboldt marten is at risk of extirpation in Oregon, we are asking the Commission to amend the staff recommendation and to enact a ban on all marten trapping west of the I-5 corridor, to ban all commercial and recreational mammal trapping in the Oregon Dunes National Recreation Area, and to ban marten traps and other traps set in trees in the Siskiyou and Siuslaw national forests to prevent incidental capture. These steps would comply with the federal Endangered Species Act and would contribute to the recovery of the Humboldt marten in Oregon.

Dear Oregon Fish and Wildlife Commission,

Please end trapping of Humboldt martens.

I live on the Oregon coast and go wildlife watching in the Oregon Dunes and also in the Siuslaw and Siskiyou National Forests. When I visit those areas, I usually buy lunch in a nearby town and sometimes I buy other things as well.

It's really important to me that our martens in these areas are protected. The forests nearest to where I live are privately owned timber plantations, with few wildlife protections, and wildlife watching is not as good there as in the Dunes and the National Forests.

There have to be safe places for wildlife to survive, and the Oregon Dunes, Siuslaw and Siskiyou National Forests would be ideal safe places for martens if trapping were banned there.

Therefore, please ban Humboldt marten trapping throughout the species' entire historic range in Oregon. To make sure that no martens are accidentally caught by traps meant for other animals, please also ban mammal trapping in the Oregon National Dunes Recreation Area and the Siskiyou and Siuslaw National Forests.

One of the best parts of living in western Oregon is wildlife watching on the beautiful public forests and dunes. Please help protect wildlife watching by protecting the martens.

Thank you!

Dear Oregon Fish and Wildlife Commission,

Please adopt measures to limit trapping of martens to only the Cascade and Blue Mtns. in order to protect the Humboldt Marten. Trapping of martens in the Siskiyou and Siuslaw National Forests and nearby private forest lands, as well as in the Oregon Dunes National Recreation Area, should be halted in order to maintain the fragile populations of the Humboldt marten. Protecting only a portion of their range would not only permit more individuals of this species to be killed, but would isolate sub-populations and interfere with gene transfer - a key factor in preventing any declining species from requiring federal listing and emergency protection measures.

Thank you for protecting the Humboldt marten, a valuable small predator in the coastal forests of Oregon.

Dear ODFW Commission,

I am writing to urge you to adopt a strong trapping ban to protect the Humboldt marten. Recent studies have concluded that two or more human-caused deaths could lead to the extirpation of this native species. With approximately 200 Humboldt martens in Oregon, it's imperative we curtail the chance of mortality. A trapping ban in all Humboldt marten territory would be an important first step.

ODFW's proposed recommendation to only ban trapping in one of the two Humboldt marten territories is insufficient and would not adequately protect this imperiled species. Before voting on the rule, it's imperative that the Fish and Wildlife Commission amend ODFW's proposal to ensure that all Humboldt marten population areas receive the necessary prohibition on trapping.

Specifically, I ask the Commission to ban Humboldt marten trapping throughout the species' historical range (west of the I-5 corridor) and ban all mammal trapping in the extant Humboldt marten population areas (Oregon National Dunes Recreation Area and Siskiyou and Siuslaw National Forests). This will ensure that traps set for other species do not unintentionally kill an imperiled Humboldt marten.

Thank you for your consideration.

Dear ODFW Commission,

This is a question more than a please sir, do your job, that comes later.

As a commissioner why haven't you done you job to protect this species?
Why haven't enacted a trapping ban in ALL it's historic and current known range?

You are in a privileged position that has a special capacity to help a rare species continue to live in our few remaining forests? Why would you shirk your duties like that.? Are you for trapping small almost extinct species?

Man up and yes this is the begging part - do your job to protect the Humbolt Marten. It is threatened with extinction. Ban trapping in all it's historically and currently known territories. And do it the very next time it is comes up on the agenda.

Dear ODFW Commission,

My wife and I are tired of and most firmly oppose the constant efforts of people to commercially profit by exploiting and often over-harvesting Oregon's publicly owned natural resources. The animals and trees on OUR lands belong to everyone, not the few that want to wring out every last dollar.

In this case I am referring to and urge you to stop trapping of the few remaining Humboldt martens in Oregon. They are a small fur bearing critter so there is virtually no significant income to be derived from trapping them for their fur.

We are very disappointed to learn that Oregon fish and wildlife is planning to only stop trapping in one of the two areas where they are found. Shame on these public servants. This is so wrong! These little animals deserve to be left as is in the relatively small acreage of habitat remaining for them. I ask you Commissioners to change fish and Wildlife's plan and give them full protection. End their fur trapping, please.

Like all wild things, this little predator has a role in a healthy ecosystem. There is no significant reason to continue to on purpose kill off any of them since their numbers are so low.

Thanks.

RE: Protect the Humboldt Marten!

Dear ODFW Commissioners,

Dear ODFW Commission:

I am writing you to urge you to take immediate action regarding the imperiled Humboldt marten.

First, I would ask you to implement the ban of trapping practices that could kill martens in the central and southern coastal areas of Oregon. The Department has not taken any action to implement the restrictions you passed in August, and the trapping season begins in November. An emergency rule may be necessary to ensure that the species does not go extinct. Recent studies have concluded that the loss of just a few individual martens annually could lead to imminent extinction of the species.

Second, I am requesting that you revisit your decision to not list the Humboldt marten as an "endangered species." The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service recently proposed the species for listing under the federal Endangered Species Act, recognizing that the best available science warrants listing for the species. However, finalizing the federal listing could take a couple of years and again, current immediate threats that highways and trapping pose to the species fall under state agency jurisdiction, and your leadership is needed to ensure the marten's recovery.

Thank you for considering my comments!

Sincerely,

Sincerely,

Subject: Please Support A Strong Trapping Ban for the Humboldt Marten

Dear ODFW Commission,

I am writing to urge you to adopt a strong trapping ban to protect the Humboldt marten. Recent studies have concluded that two or more human-caused deaths could lead to the extirpation of this native species. With approximately 200 Humboldt martens in Oregon, it's imperative we curtail the chance of mortality. A trapping ban in all Humboldt marten territory would be an important first step.

ODFW's proposed recommendation to only ban trapping in one of the two Humboldt marten territories is insufficient and would not adequately protect this imperiled species. Before voting on the rule, it's imperative that the Fish and Wildlife Commission amend ODFW's proposal to ensure that all Humboldt marten population areas receive the necessary prohibition on trapping.

Specifically, I ask the Commission to ban Humboldt marten trapping throughout the species' historical range (west of the I-5 corridor) and ban all mammal trapping in the extant Humboldt marten population areas (Oregon National Dunes Recreation Area and Siskiyou and Siuslaw National Forests). This will ensure that traps set for other species do not unintentionally kill an imperiled Humboldt marten.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Danielle Moser

Subject: Ban all trapping of the Humboldt Marten

Dear ODFW Commission,

Trapping for fur or sport is an antiquated and destructive activity that should not be lawful outside of subsistence situation. Recent studies have concluded that two or more human-caused deaths could lead to the extirpation of Humboldt martens, a native species. With approximately 200 Humboldt martens in Oregon, it's imperative we curtail the chance of mortality. A trapping ban in all Humboldt marten territory would be an important first step.

ODFW's proposed recommendation to only ban trapping in one of the two Humboldt marten territories is insufficient and would not adequately protect this imperiled species. Before voting on the rule, it's imperative that the Fish and Wildlife Commission amend ODFW's proposal to ensure that all Humboldt marten population areas receive the necessary prohibition on trapping.

Specifically, I ask the Commission to ban Humboldt marten trapping throughout the species' historical range (west of the I-5 corridor) and ban all mammal trapping in the extant Humboldt marten population areas (Oregon National Dunes Recreation Area and Siskiyou and Siuslaw National Forests). This will ensure that traps set for other species do not unintentionally kill an imperiled Humboldt marten.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

Ms. Courtney Romine-Mann
