About the Waterfowl Stamp Program

Oregon has had a waterfowl stamp every year since 1984. Waterfowl validations are now printed directly on hunting licenses, so the Department no longer requires a physical stamp be carried in the field while hunting. However, the Department still makes the stamp available (at no additional charge) to hunters who purchased a validation. Stamp collectors may also purchase the stamp.

From 1995-2013, internationally renowned wildlife artist Robert Steiner was under contract to produce the featured artwork on the waterfowl stamp. The Department has now opened up a public contest to select the artwork featured on the waterfowl stamp.

RECOMMENDATIONS FOR PACKAGING ARTWORK

Please remember to pack your artwork carefully for entry into the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife stamp contest(s). Artwork that is hand delivered to the Salem Headquarters Office still needs to be enclosed in protective packaging to prevent damage while storing and in transit to the judging event.

For packing artwork, we recommend the following:

1. Use a stiff packing material to ensure that the art will not be bent or damaged in transit. We find that artwork placed in a shallow box or sandwiched between two pieces of cardboard that are just slightly bigger than the artwork is best. This is a simple packing method, there is little space for the artwork to shift around in, and often costs less to ship than using a large box.
2. We discourage the use of packing peanuts, lots of bubble wrap, or other packaging fillers as the artwork can still shift around inside the box. If your box is sized to your artwork, often a piece of foam board on each side of your artwork is enough padding to protect it.
3. If you are entering multiple entries into our contests, we recommend you ship all the entries in the same box. Place a protective cover or sheet of paper between each entry.
4. If you are hand delivering your entry, you are welcome to place your art in a portfolio or light cardboard mailer for protection.
5. Remember if you do not win, your artwork will be shipped/returned to you in the packaging you entered it in. The Oregon Department of Fish & Wildlife is not responsible for damages incurred during shipping.
